SPEAKER AGENDA ITEMS	NOTES
Kendall Nagy, Director: Welcome & Intros	(all) sign-in, introductions
Guest Speaker: Dr. Bingham, DVM - Intermountain Pet Hospital	(Dr. Bingham) serving our community as a DMV and owner for 23 years. Locations in Meridian, Middleton and Nampa. Veterinary clinics are Prescriber Drug Outlets (PDOS), they are not pharmacies. Veterinarians are regulated as of now but were not 10 years ago. Prescriber Drug Outlets are under the supervision of the board of pharmacy (BOP), but don't have the same regulations as a pharmacy. Pharmacies can't and don't carry all veterinary medications, nor are pharmacists trained in veterinary pharmacology. They aren't qualified to be a pharmacist in a veterinary hospital. A trained technician in veterinary medicine is a better fit both financially and knowledge wise than a human pharmacist. We still get inspected by the BOP every 6-12 months who will come through and make sure all drugs are accounted for, logs are accurate, and we have standard operation procedures that we are following. We could be fined or shut down if we aren't compliant with the regulations of the board of pharmacy. So we are regulated, but not to the degree that a human pharmacy is. As far as risks of drug abuse in small animal veterinary medicine, it is more likely to be with staff than clients. Risk is mostly with dispensed narcotics. With clients the risk is mostly with written prescriptions. We don't dispense very many controlled substances. If we are in doubt we call the BOP and they can check the Prescription Drug Monitoring Program (PDMP) for discrepancies or indicators of abuse/doctor shopping. To reduce risk we drug test new hires and random drug test all current employees. The controlled drug box is always locked and only accessible by a few technicians or doctors. All controlled drugs are logged and the log is verified every day. Different people doing different parts of controlled drugs are logged and the log is verified every day. Different people doing different parts of controlled drug sare logged and the log is verified every day. Different people doing different parts of controlled drug sare the takeback information. 		(Katie R.) Do you have a same protocol like you do in the ER? (Dr. Bingham) Yes. (Danielle) Do you need two people to sign off? (Dr. Bingham) Yes. (Earl) Is this just your hospital's procedure? (Dr. Bingham) Every hospital has its own responsibility to monitor, and can get checked up on. And when in doubt we call the Board of Pharmacy. (Danielle) Do they come for trends? (Dr. Bingham) Yes. They look for trends and inventory. All of our staff gets drug tested. (Katie R.) Do you do the same safeguards for all staff? (Dr.
		Bingham) Yes. Even I get drug-tested. And it is random. (Susie) What about xylazine? (Dr. Bingham) We use for it for sedation. It is not a controlled substance because it is not addictive on its own. But if you use it in combination with another drug it can enhance the addiction. (Susie) So if I needed xylazine for my horse, you would give it to me? (Dr. Bingham) No. No vet would do that. (Susie) People want to know where they are getting it? (Kendall) Probably on the internet. (Earl) Are animals being brought in with Marijuana overdoses? (Dr. Bingham) Yes, a dog came in recently. It was staggering all over and peeing on itself. You know its marijuana because they eat a treat super-fast. Marijuana toxicity is common. (Kati C.)
		What about amphetamines? (Dr. Bingham) No, it's not super common. (Earl) Thank you so for coming.
